The original catalogue was prepared by the following committee:
Arthur I. Andrews, Ph.D., Chairman, Department of History, Simmons College.
Ellen Scott Davison, Ph.D., Department of History, Bradford Academy.
William S. Ferguson, Ph.D., Department of History, Harvard University.
Walter H. Cushing, Treasurer, the High School, South Framingham, Mass.
Louis R. Wells, Department of History, Mechanic Arts High School, Boston.
Mabelle L. Moses, Secretary, Department of History, Wellesley College.
Ernest F. Henderson, Ph.D., Boston.

The collection of historical material of the New England History Teachers' Association is situated at Simmons College, in the Fenway, Boston, reached from Copley Square by Huntington avenue, or by Boylston street and Brookline avenue. The main building of the college is not far from the Boston Museum of Fine Arts and the Harvard Medical School.

The college building is open at all times, but owing to the fact that classes hold sessions in the rooms occupied by the collection, teachers are urged to visit the college between 3.30 and 6 on weekdays, or at any time Saturdays. Admission can be gained on Sundays or outside the regular college hours by pressing the electric button at the front entrance.

The arrangement of the collection is as follows:
Office of the committee, Room 133.
American History, second floor, Rooms 225 and 223.
Ancient History, second floor, Rooms 228 and 226.
English History, second floor, Room 223.
Continental European History, second floor, Room 229.
Economic History, second floor, Room 223.
Africa and Asia, first floor, Room 133.
Casts, models, atlases and books at end of the hall on the second floor.
Catalogues of the material can be obtained there and at Room 133; price 50 cents.

All visitors are earnestly requested to register at Room 133 or Room 215.
In arranging this catalogue five main sections were assigned to the material belonging to American, Ancient, English, Continental European, Economic history, and one section to that material common to all these fields, the General and Miscellaneous. In this general section is listed material concerning the whole world, including maps of world, of hemispheres, and of continents, globes, general atlases, series of outline maps, outline atlases and historical notebooks, and series of pictures, not belonging particularly to any special field of history.

In practically every case, the objects upon exhibition are the property of this association. Loans have been received only upon the understanding that the objects loaned were to be replaced from time to time by new or fresh material. Material marked "S. C." belongs to Simmons College, but is upon exhibition to visitors along with the material belonging to the association.

The full names and addresses of publishers or agents are, however, given in the Directory at the end of the catalogue. In the catalogue itself only such information as seemed most necessary has been given, such as publisher, agent, series, size, and price. On the other hand, the committee is endeavoring to secure all possible information about all kinds of historical material and will be glad to answer questions. Requests for the catalogues of the dealers should be sent direct to them, since they are prepared to give special attention to those interested in this collection.

The prices for maps or wall-pictures are for the most inexpensive examples, unless otherwise stated. Such material can be furnished by dealers with spring-rollers or in cases. The discounts quoted apply only on orders direct to the publishers or general agents. Outline maps lack the names of places, but generally have the natural features indicated and sometimes named. The most important and larger ones have been listed in the special sections, the smaller or less important in the general and miscellaneous group.

Special attention is called to the movement, developed during the past year, and now well under way, toward supplying teachers of American history with a series of historical maps and of historical wall pictures, both from originals. A study of the American section will reveal additions of this kind.

The United States Government and the Canadian Government issue many maps which would be of great assistance to teachers and which can be secured for little or nothing.

It was not found possible to catalogue all the large wall pictures in the special sections. In a few cases where it seemed important enough, cross references were made.

Chronological charts have been listed separately under charts. Historical charts upon standards and forming a series of maps, with or without text or tables, have been placed under maps.

Very little attempt has been made, so far, to increase the exhibit of atlases and illustrated books. These departments have developed, almost of themselves, until recently, but now a sub-committee is working out their possibilities. This is also true of lantern slides, a few of which, illustrating American history are now in the collection. It has not been possible to include the large number of source-books and foreign books, forming a minor part of its collection.

The foreign models are all catalogued in the section devoted to Continental European History. Further notes and suggestions concerning them are given there. The committee is endeavoring to make this part of the exhibition more representative and comprehensive. The results of its work will appear in later reports.

The Economic section has not been developed as extensively as it will be. Much of the material scattered through the other sections could, however, be classed under "aids to the teaching of economics."

Further information as to the work of the committee and additions to this collection will be given annually in the Reports of the New England

History Teachers' Association, published in the History Teachers' Magazine.

Names in parentheses are those of dealers who are not the publishers of the articles in question. The committee will be glad to answer inquiries as to the nature of any article.

The committee gratefully acknowledges the great assistance received from the advanced students of Library Science at Simmons College, by whom the large part of the cataloguing was completed.

There are on exhibition a few articles lent by private individuals, which, because of the temporary nature of the exhibits, are not listed in the catalogue as for example the relief maps of Belgium loaned by Mr. A. Gietzen. The committee wishes to express its gratitude to the lenders and will be glad to have teachers examine these and the other exhibits.
